00:00

Welcome to the rabbi Daniel Lapin show where I, your rabbi, reveal how the world or really works. Yes, welcome to each of you happy warriors. And I'll remind you that the phrase happy warrior is one that I borrowed.

00:29

That means plagiarized from the English poet William Wordsworth, who wrote a poem about the happy warrior in the early 1800s. I don't remember the exact date.

00:41

But some of the lines are really beautiful. And it goes like this,

00:47

"Who is the happy warrior, Who is he, that every man in arms should wish to be? It is the generous spirit, who in brought, finds comfort in himself and in his calls. And while the mortal mysteries gathering draws his breath in confidence of heavens applause, this is the happy warrior, this is he that every man in arms should wish to be."

01:19

And I think of myself and my wife, Susan, and, and, and each and every one of you listening right now. I think of y'all as happy warriors with a man or woman, all happy warriors, because to live productively, you have to fight every day, against the force of entropy of nothing else, you fight to maintain your possessions. You fight to build and maintain your family, you fight to build and grow your money. You fight to take care of your body, and your business or your profession or your career. Look, God created a world in which chaos and disorder rule. In other words, the default condition in this world of ours is chaos disorder.

02:08

If neglected, gardens turn into jungles, cities turn into ruins. But never does it go the other way around.

02:19

Genesis chapter one, verse two, literally, the second verse of the Hebrew Scriptures speaks about a phrase tau who boho, which is found its way into the dictionary, meaning chaos and confusion. And, and it's something that obviously God thought was important enough for us to know right upfront, second verse, which is you got to know that he has put us in a world where the natural default is chaos. You don't want to take care of your car, it'll go and deteriorate into a pile of rust. You don't want to take care of your children.

02:58

It's going to go badly. You don't want to nurture your marriage, just want to leave your marriage, let it take care of itself, it's going to deteriorate. Life is a fight. And that's a good thing. Because to stop fighting, let's just stop seeking to stop striving. Well, that just means you're dying. That's all. And I call you not just warriors, but happy warriors. Because to throw yourself into the fight for eight or 10 or 12 hours a day, six days a week. That's one thing. But to throw yourself into that fight for six days a week, many hours a day.

03:43

But to do all that with a debonair smile on your face and a jaunty pace to your stride, to do all that while generating an irrepressible surge of happiness welling up inside your soul, and spreading that to the people with whom you associate well, that means you are spiritually grounded in everything that is life affirming, devoted to your faith, your families, your finances, your fitness and your friends, knowing that you can triumph over those who both intentionally and unknowingly promote a dark abyss of satanic secular socialism, and all of the many destructive and evil so social pathologies that that world view generates. And one of them that I wanted to speak about now was fertility is quite a lot of interesting things that have come across my desk this last week. And fortunately, many of you around the world supply me with information though

04:59

Those of you who know me well enough, over the years, send me information that is relevant and information that, you know, that I care about. And so, I wonder how many of you know what America's fertility rate was in 2020? last year?

05:21

Okay, so it's kind of interesting. Before I tell you that though, I should tell you that the fertility rate for maintenance of population is 2.1. Right, you got to have on average, 2.1 children per woman. And that way you maintain a fairly stable sized population. Now, what many people would intuitively jump to? Is the idea? Well, that makes sense. And surely, that's exactly what we'd want to have happen, right? Let's keep a stable population, zero population growth? Because look, things are pretty good now. So why would we want to spoil it by increasing? Well, I'll tell you why. Because the natural process of life means that a mother and a father reach a certain age where they need support.

And how many children does it take to do that? Well, given that every child has to also take care of himself, or herself and his or her families, the excess available to take care of the previous generations a little bit less. So 2.1 does not quite cut it. Because two people, namely 2.1, children can't take care of two adult, two parents, that doesn't work. You have to have more. And so not surprisingly, some people say, Well, wait a second, you know, that's not true. Because today, we got Social Security. Okay, fine. If you stop to actually think how social security works, Social Security is paid in by the current working generation, and handed over this basically, income redistribution, right? from young to old. This is not what it was originally sold as, Hey, everybody will cut a hole slice out of your income, it'll be part of your tax system. And we'll invest it for you so that no matter what happens in your life, you'll always be No, that's not what happened. It got absorbed into in a very corrupt way.

The truth is that without everything else going on, what was done to Social Security should be one of the greatest scandals of our time. But there is so much competition for scandals. It slides into the background, right? I mean, I really feel like we should let our hair down a little bit. Right? And, and just really pour out the intensity of our feelings on what was really done. leading our hair down. There are those who will claim that it's more a case of my head, having led me down. But that takes us off topic entirely. And so yeah, we still need more than two children per couple. In order for society to continue functioning.

08:41

We do at 2.1 is the absolute base minimum. And all that does is make sure that the graph of our population year by year looks like a rectangle, the sides of vertical, they're not shrinking in, they're not going out. Ideally, what you need is a pyramid structure of population. But so in, in other words, in Africa, we have it in Africa right now, as a total. I mean, it varies, right? In some countries, it's less. But in places like Nigeria, for instance, it's seven, seven children per couple in Africa as an average across the continent. 4.5 4.5 children, Israel, the highest in the western developed world. 3.1. And one of the great pleasures of visiting Israel and those of you who have been there have noticed that it's just really nice to see a lot of kids around. You go, you know, walk past any playground, and there's kids playing there. There's kids getting on off the buses, they're kids in the street, little kids all over the place. This produces an atmosphere of hope and optimism and then atmosphere of faith in the future. And so, Africa 4.5. Israel 3.1.

10:09

United States of America 1.64. This is not good. It's not good at all. And so it leads us to two questions, right. One is, what is the effect of this? And the second question is what's causing it? What's happening? Well, the effect is not good. In, in China, something really interesting has just happened. You'll remember that about 35 years ago, approximately China instituted the one child rule. And it was very rigorously and cruelly and brutally enforced, forced sterilization, forced abortions. They really clamped down and allowed only one child. Well, one of the unintended consequences of that was an excess of 50 million or more men than women. Alright, the social unrest that flows from that is obvious. And the idea that a cohort of 50 million men will never find mates. Even the Chinese Communist Party

The Rabbi Daniel Lapin Podcast

Episode: Plummeting Sperm Counts is the Problem, not Climate Change. What's With You Guys?

figured out pretty quickly that that is a social calamity. So huge problem. And indeed, it has been, of course. And so they changed it. I think, in 2015, they changed it to two children is a by the way, probably why that happened is because when couples can only have one child, the overwhelming majority of men, and the majority of women want their child to be a boy. If they can be more children, then they're less concerned. But if there's only going to be one child, then female children would be aborted. And that's exactly what happened in India when they tried this rule. And it's exactly what happened in China.

Alright, now you might say, Well, in this day and age of enlightened ideas on sex and gender, that surely doesn't happen - yeah it actually does. It happens in New York, and happens in Los Angeles, and happens everywhere around the world, where human beings, when couples are having a baby married couples, predominantly, when they're having a baby. They would like that first child to be a boy, particularly if they're not sure whether they're going to have more, you know, people, some people go into marriage saying, you know, what, we're gonna have a big family, God willing, to whatever extent we can manage, but otherwise, people, Yes, that is right, you know, that men would prefer their first child to be a boy is, as I said, overwhelming. The big surprise is that about 65% of women would like their first child to be a boy as well.

13:08

So as you can imagine, it was absolutely predictable what would happen in China, what would happen in India, but they've just changed it again. And they've China's now changed it to three children are now allowed. But this time, it was done for economic reasons. Now, why economic reasons? Well, as I said earlier, and even if you've got Social Security, or perhaps particularly, you really do need more children in each generation, you absolutely have to have a pyramid shaped structure. But even beyond that, even if you say look where we're centuries away from the old model of children having to farm the field, says that elderly father and mother can stay home in a farmhouse. It doesn't make any difference today, it's no longer working in the fields, but it is investment funds, and dividends and shares, all of which do depend on a growing population. That's right. And you only just you just have to think your way through this for a few minutes.

14:21

And, and you will see, growth is all important. And so companies constantly report our growth over last year. Right? All the time. A country itself speaks about growth in GDP, how important that is to have a healthy growth year after year, because everybody recognizes that stagnation doesn't work. And staying the same is very seldom an option. You're either shrinking or growing. You're either becoming more alive or you're dying. You're either growing your company or your company is shrinking.

15:00

But the idea that it can just stay exactly the same, hugely problematic. And, and so you think your way through this, and you see that in order for a vibrant economy, to have durability, you've got to have a growing population. However, it's not just a growing population.

15:20

Because if it were, then the genius of France and Germany and Sweden, bringing in huge numbers of single, male, Muslim immigrants from the Middle East and North Africa, well, that would seem to be an incredibly brilliant economic move. However, you don't really need me to tell you what a colossal disaster that has actually turned out to be. You see, a very important point that the world of secular fundamentalism does not contemplate a very important point that the wonderful world of progressivism cannot only not contemplate, but will not tolerate is that not all human beings are the same. Humans live by different value systems, call it cultures if you like. And so if you want to be able to make money, if you want to be able to live comfortably, with as little stress as possible, then you want to live in a place with a large population. Because the larger the population, the more likely it is that there will be a viable market for what you do or what you sell. And so you definitely want to be in a place with a big population rather than place with a small population. So I mean, what I'm telling you is something you all know for yourselves, right? There's a reason that people leave villages and little towns and migrate to the cities, because your opportunity of creating wealth in a city is much better than in a small town, because you're in contact with more people. So what is one of the rules, you've got to have more people, but that's not enough, they have to be unified. That's where France, Germany, Sweden, fell down with by importing millions of single Muslim males, whose culture could hardly be more different from that of traditional Germanic culture. Right? Please don't think for a moment that all the important single male Muslim immigrants are all working at the BMW factory in Munich, - all right, that's not happening. Don't think that the millions, more than 6 million Muslims living in France, please don't think that they are busy running French bistros and creating good French wine. No, that's not happening. Because population by itself isn't the issue. It's got to be people who are unified by language, by a specific culture, they've got to be unified by customs, above all, by trust, they've got to be able to interconnect with all of those things, it is vastly easier to create economic transactions that produce wealth.

18:38

So just remember this, that the wonderful world of progressives will not acknowledge the fact that not everybody is the same. Right? If you import to your country, a million people who are committed to honesty and transparency, committed to hard work, who reject the idea of living on other people's sweat, who are committed to education, and decent living, and marital stability and sexual structure. And that's the group of people you import your country, you're going to see an almost instantaneous increase in wealth creation.

19:31

But if you import a million people who don't speak your language, don't want to speak your language, have a culture. Laziness is not a good way of putting it although it's part of it. But a culture that is not a work related culture. Don't forget, Judeo Christian Bible based culture that created Western civilization starts off in the beginning of Genesis, God put Adam in the Garden of Eden To work it.

Right, that's it. In other words, each and every one of us, we are our own Adams, we each are trying to create our own garden of Eden. And we are put here to work, we're not put here to have leisure time, we're not put here to have fun. So if you if you suddenly have a million people in your country, who are happy to live another people sweat, have no culture of work, who steal, right? They, their culture does not object to stealing. It doesn't object to looting, you import a bunch of people who think in terms of the lines I'm talking about. And not only haven't you improved the economic viability of your society, you've actually made it worse, because you've now imported a million takers instead of a million makers.

But remember, secular fundamentalism rejects the idea that there's a difference. Why? Because at the heart of secular fundamentalism, you'll remember is, of course, the idea that we are nothing but animals, we're essentially animals. And as animals, or animals, or any particular species are exactly the same. Right? If if you're going to buy three cows for your farm, you don't really care about what the values of each cow is. And so secular fundamentalism rejects the idea that values are important for human beings, any more than values are important for animals. Because secular fundamentalism believes that we are all nothing but sophisticated animals. And what is not true who animals should not be true for people, animals do not have family structure, and marital stability. So stop pretending that family structure and marital stability are important for people and animals do not have a system of values. So stop pretending that values are important for people, all cows are the same, or people are the same. The cow that you have just bought is going to produce a predictable supply of milk, regardless of its value system doesn't have a value system. But the economic productivity of a person is hugely dependent upon their value system. Right? That should be pretty clear now.

22:43

The the importance of a growing population, I cannot adequately stress I speak about it very often, because of the intuitive idea that we should just keep the population exactly the way it is. Intuitively, it might at first glance appear to be a very good idea. But you don't even need me. You can figure it out for yourself, it doesn't work, you absolutely have to have a triangle structure where each generation is larger than the one preceding it. Right? That's that's what the graph has to look like. And you can you can figure that out. And if not, I'll tell you if I hear from people that that doesn't make sense, then I'll devote a show to explaining that. But this is so fundamental, that at the very beginning, right at the beginning of Genesis, we have in verse chapter one, verse 27. "And God created man in His image in the image of God, He created him, male and female, he created them. And God blessed them saying, Be fruitful and multiply." And then, when Plan A with Adam didn't quite work out and there was a flood. God starts over again with Noah. And again in chapter nine, verse one, and God bless Noah and his children, and he said to them, "Be fruitful and multiply and fill the earth." So this is something that shows up the meaning of Genesis chapter one shows up again in Genesis nine, Be fruitful and multiply. Now, I teach a verse by verse through Genesis, called Scrolling Through Scripture. And it's, it's so amazingly important that I actually devote more than 20 - more than 10 hours to the first 34 verses of Genesis, going from Genesis chapter one verse one, up to Genesis chapter two verse four.

The Rabbi Daniel Lapin Podcast

Episode: Plummeting Sperm Counts is the Problem, not Climate Change. What's With You Guys?

24:59

I take more than 10 hours to teach that. And that's because so many important lessons. So many important fundamental principles are being laid out, such as the one I'm talking about right now, and many, many, many others. So, if you are interested in doing a deep dive into the book, that created Western civilization, the book on the basis of which political tranquility and economic prosperity was created in ways that do not appear anywhere else in the world, remember that the idea of a capital markets came to be only indigenously, only in countries founded on Christianity, right? Today, their stock markets everywhere, right. But Originally, the idea of a capital market came about only in countries like places like London and Amsterdam, England and Holland, places that were founded, because so much of what we take for granted in terms of human economic interaction is rooted in biblical principles. And so I lay this out and explain why it is that even when it comes to things like cleanliness and hygiene, just think about it. It's not just banks, it's also bathrooms, you know, banks and bathrooms, think about banks and bathrooms in Bombay, and Bangkok and Beijing, you know, shall we say, 100 years ago, 150 years ago, the bathroom was a hole in the ground. And if you were very rich, you had two places on the side of the hallway, your feet could go while you crouch, and a bank was sticking some gold in the mattress under your bed. That was what banks and bathrooms used to look like.

27:01

So why is it that as time went by banks and bathrooms in shall we say Boston and Birmingham, and Bristol did not end up looking like banks and bathrooms in Bombay and Beijing and Bangkok. But no, banks and bathrooms in Boston and Birmingham and Baltimore. Stay staid this, they are the ones where hygiene and cleanliness and economic viability got copied by the others. And eventually, we got to the point where today, when you walk into a bank or a bathroom, in Bangkok, and Beijing and Bombay, they look pretty much the same as banks and bathrooms do when you go into one of those in Baltimore or Boston or bet ora or Birmingham, right? And why is it that the world seems to have moved in the direction of a biblically sculpted society. And it's not just cleanliness and hygiene and, and finances, but it's in marriage as well. male female relations, what works and what doesn't, and many, many, many other things. So I mentioned this, because this is not something I'm going to do ever on this program. But for those of you who are interested in being able to do for yourselves, what this material did for entire countries, nations and societies, then you may want to Scroll Through Scripture, and what you do if you want to read more about it or see a sample lesson of how this works, or just go to the website, right RabbiDanielLapin.com. And over at RabbiDanielLapin.com, you'll find Scrolling through Scripture and one of the things you'll find there is that this phrase be fruitful and multiply is a bad and utterly incorrect translation of the Hebrew which sounds like this [Hebrew spoken] can hear they're not the same words at all. And the King James translation in the early 17th century, set out this model of sort of turning it into a poetic repetition, Be fruitful and multiply. There's no difference between those two words, right? The Bible doesn't work on the wave poet in by the way of poetry. It works by the way of mathematical precision. And so when two different words are used for something, you can be absolutely sure that we're talking about two fundamentally different concepts. And, sure

29:14

The Rabbi Daniel Lapin Podcast

Episode: Plummeting Sperm Counts is the Problem, not Climate Change. What's With You Guys?

Date: 06/04/2021 Length: 1:32:22

enough, proof of mu whether in Genesis chapter one or in Genesis chapter nine, with Noah, those Two words, don't mean be fruitful and multiply. They're not talking about just producing children. That's easy. No, the actual translation is have children biologically, and then raise them. infuse them with values, teach them spiritually. That's what [Hebrew spoken] means not be fruitful and multiply, Be fruitful, and then raise your children responsibly. Teaching them how the world really works. That's what you have to do. And that's the way society functions, you got to have more people. But it's also got to be the right kind of people, what are the right kind of people, people with the right values, right. And because the left secular, secular fundamentalism, the wonderful world of progressives, that whole world is obsessed, and fixated on materialism.

31:06

And so all that matters are the things you can see. And that's why they're so obsessed with skin color. That's the fundamental distinction between people. Has anybody noticed what a disaster The United States has been? Since the obsession with skin color began under President Barack Obama, anybody aware what a disaster has been? Sure. Because that may be a very good way of distinguishing between cows, you can have a brown cow, or you can have a black and white cow and they probably have a lot of other different species of cows. You want to buy a llama, llamas come in different in different colors, colors important. If you if you want virtually all other kinds of animals, right? You may well pick them out by by color.

31:59

Goats, right, you want to get some goats for your children, pick out the right color, you want black goats, white girls, whatever you want. But with human beings, what really matters is what you cannot see. It's not the physical material part of us. It's the spiritual part of us, you can't see that. And the wonderful world of progressives totally denies the reality of spiritual values. And yet all that distinguishes between a viable society and a non viable society are spiritual values. It's not color, absolutely not. It's the what you can't see the spiritual values. And so it becomes apparent that the fundamental biblical principle of you got to have more people each generation you got to have more.

32:54

That's step one. Number two, you got to make sure that each generation is acculturated to the values of the preceding. Gotta do that. And when a country starts letting children grow up believing the worst about their own culture, believing only the worst about their ancestors, their fathers and great grandmother's, the worst, then you have a very doomed society. Right? Make sure you got plenty of your assets in movable easily transportable goods, because where you are, is not long for this world of stability and tranquility and prosperity. Not going to happen and having your assets in in movable possessions. I know some of you are thinking that's what Bitcoin is. That's what cryptocurrency is. And I've received a lot of very valuable correspondence from many of you with respect to the program I did recently within the last couple of months on Bitcoin and I did an initial take i didn't i did not tell you whether I recommend Ron I'm not gonna tell you that but I tried to give you as much information as I could to enable you to make your own educated decision on cryptocurrency but for those of you who believe that cryptocurrency is good and works well then it's it's wonderful because if the worst comes to the worst and you have to move from wherever you're living now somewhere else, you you literally could not wish for more portable assets than your your cryptocurrency digital wallet. That's all you need. For those of you who are more skeptical about about cryptocurrency like Bitcoin or Ethereum, Then you will want to go probably with gold. And you know, gold bullion or or gold coins like the Canadian Maple Leaf or the South African Krugerrand or even the Chinese panda. But whatever it is, if in fact, you feel that the the society where you live is failing, either biologically not reproducing itself, or spiritually, in other words, the [Hebrew spoken], either your society is not producing a triangular shaped population growth, or you feel that your society is failing to educate and acculturate and provide a value system to the next generation. Or both. What if you live in a country or a society where neither of those things are happening? The rapid replacement rate is very low. And the children that are being born, are not being raised properly. That's when you really want to make sure that if you need to, you can move with portability. That's, that's my sort of Jewish background speaking, right?

The Rabbi Daniel Lapin Podcast

Episode: Plummeting Sperm Counts is the Problem, not Climate Change. What's With You Guys?

We just tend to think very much in terms of nothing but God is permanent. All right, you just you can't say permanence. There isn't such a thing. changes happen. And sometimes change is dramatic. And you know, there's a phrase I use when I'm speaking to Jewish audiences now trying to make this point. I sometimes say, Warsaw, January 1939. Let's tell you in Warsaw, Poland, in January 1939, life was pretty good. People were making money, they were living in tranquility, Poland was a fairly civilized place. I'm not saying there was no Polish anti semitism. Yeah, there was there were problems, no question. But basically, in the city of Warsaw, not only Jews, but everybody was living very tranquilly. And it was only nine months later that Germany invaded Poland. And things changed very quickly and very dramatically, with very little warning. And so it's important that happy warriors train themselves to live and happily with a certain degree of uncertainty. Right, you don't have to feel that your your security comes from your assets, know, your security is spiritual in nature, and that travels with you. So you can live with a certain degree of physical insecurity, as long as it's more than matched by spiritual security. And that's how that works. Now, I think it's really important to, for every happy warrior, to train himself or to train herself, to understand that a lot of the information that you receive, has already been filtered. And is as much is likely to be as much indoctrination and propaganda, as it is to be genuine information. And you have to get used to filtering things through your own God given mind, what we have to do is utterly banish from our souls, the respect we have for experts, the respect we have for studies, the respect we have for sentences that begin, science tells us, you've really got to be very careful about these things. Because when they say science tells us what they usually mean is scientists tell us which scientists are very specific. And so be careful about things like this. For instance, America's Center for Immigration Studies, recently put out when I say recently, the beginning of summer 2021, like very recently put out a study that you don't have to worry about the decline in population in America. You don't have to worry that the population is declining. And the only reason it's even where it is, is because of illegal immigration. You don't have to worry because in any event, having more people in the country I'm quoting now is no guarantee of higher income for every individual. I'm now quoting more it is clear, says the director of research of the Center for immigrant Studies, it's clear that the simplistic argument that more population growth necessarily leads to more per capita economic growth. It's not obvious in fact, the evidence seems to be the other way around. Okay? You're being gamed here. Do you hear what he's saying?

The Rabbi Daniel Lapin Podcast

Episode: Plummeting Sperm Counts is the Problem, not Climate Change. What's With You Guys?

40:18

More population growth leads to more per capita economic growth. That's not true. He says, What did I just say? Do not just say that be fruitful. And multiply does mean be fruitful, multiply, it means be fruitful, and be diligent and responsible about educating and acculturating your children. So more population, more population that is unified, and connected, and are culturally coherent.

40:52

By the way, diversity, don't believe when they tell you diversity is an advantage. It's not an advantage in business, it's not an advantage in society. When they say diversity, they mean color, skin color, that's the relevant, right, I don't care what color the skin is of people, that with who I'm trying to perform a mission or build a company. I don't mind that. Right? The US Army is a perfect example of that the uniform color matters, not the skin color. But I do care about cultural cohesiveness. I don't want cultural diversity. There's no hope of me performing a mission successfully if my team is made up of some people who think work is a value of some who don't, some think honesty is a value, some don't. Some think that diligence and integrity are value, some don't. Some are flexible in their integrity, others on you can't that's that would be diversity, and it is a disaster. It's not something we want to talk. So in the same way, you got to be aware that when they're saying what they're trying to say, See, you don't have to worry about shrinking population. They're gaming you because you do have to worry about it. They say, well, it's not true that more population growth leads to more per capita economic growth. Well, that's true. I agree with that. Because you need two conditions, neither one is sufficient on its own, you need a growing population, and a growing population made up of people who have the same values, who connect with each other on a deeper level. But he throws in another means of deceiving you, per capita economic growth. Now, way the set per capita economic growth means on average, the amount that every person in society gets more now, I might be the most compassionate person, I might be the most moral person which I'm not. But regardless of how beautifully human being you are, the fact is you don't care about per capita economic growth, you care about your economic growth. And the point made by Adam Smith, so beautifully in his important book published in the end of the 18th century, the Wealth of Nations a study into the Wealth of Nations, the beautiful point there is that if we each and every one of us worry about our own income, then it's going to be good for everybody. And that's the beautiful thing, when he said, it's not out of the goodness of his soul, that the butcher and the baker and the candlestick maker, provide you with the goods you need. They're doing it for their own reasons. Yeah. And the result is we all have what we need.

43:46

And so this is a bit of a and that's a very deceitful move to talk about. Well added population doesn't add to per capita economic growth. No, that's true. But it adds to the growth of people who are creating, not destroying, it adds to the growth of people who are makers, not takers. In other words, I move to a neighborhood I moved to a city I moved to a country, which has opportunities for individuals, it's of much less interest to me that there is an average per capita economic growth. I don't care about that.

And so what they're trying to tell you and this, this study from the Center for Immigration Studies, well, they're trying to tell you a stop worrying. You know, when Rabbi Daniel Lapin tells you that the dropping fertility in America is down to 1.6 for children, and he says it's a colossal calamity in the making. Don't pay any attention.

44:59

There's no relationship between slowing and declining population and per capita economic growth. Yeah, as I've explained it, he's right, that he's also assuming that most people are not going to probe. They're just going to read the headline. Oh, guess what, you know what? population growth isn't important? Okay, great. Why? Because that is what the left wishes to believe. And the idea that it can all be made up as lack of fertility can be made up by immigrants. Well, why don't you phone up Germany and ask how it's working out for them, phone up France, find out how it's working out for them. immigrants who do not subscribe to the same values that bring unity and connectivity and widespread trust base. Well, that doesn't do much good, I'm afraid.

46:09

And so we've just got it got to be really alert to these kinds of things. Now, I told you that China has now relaxed, right? It's no longer a one child policy. It's not even a two child policy. Now couples can have three children. And that's like, as of now, what changed? Why did this come about? Well, I didn't tell you what China's fertility rate was. Remember, I told you that Africa as a whole was 4.5. I told you that even Israel, right was 3.1. And then I told you that the United States of America is 1.6 1.6. Remembering that 2.1 is the absolute minimum while China is 1.3. Worse than America, they're down to 1.3. What's going on there? Well, several things. First of all, we're now paid or not, we they are now paying the price of the many years of the one child policy. Because all the years that they were running the one child policy, huge numbers of baby girls were being aborted. And by the way, in many cases are killed after birth as well.

47:29

So there is now a massive female gap in the childbearing age population. So the number of women available to have children, if I can put it in those terms, is way down from where it should be. So that is one reason that China is so far below replacement rate 1.3. And the other reason is that it is a lot easier for a government to bring about a form of behavior in its population than it is to get rid of it. We see it in the United States of America. By the way. It was scary to many of us. It was truly terrifying to many of us how easily the government was able to persuade people to Don Musk's. But in spite of the science, in spite of the realities, in spite of the truths, they managed to get the population in America to wear masks, not only some of them, were terrified not to wear them. Some believed it was a mark of virtue it showed you cared. But whatever it was, they managed very quickly, to get people to wear masks. So much so that at this point already, at this point, I still see people driving alone in their cars wearing masks.

49:06

The fact is, it's a whole lot easier to get people to wear masks than to get them to stop doing so when you've decided that's enough. And it's a whole lot easier to get people used to not building families than it is to come to them and say okay, everybody time to have families again. So that's another thing that that China is finding. And the third thing is that as the acculturation of the society moves in the direction of leftism, that's for America, and of course, China has been left for many years already since the revolution.

49:49

The tendency is for women and men's roles to become confused and conflated, and women feel injured. enrolled. I'm not saying every single woman feels this obviously it goes without saying, but in general, certainly in the United States of America today, many, many young women have been culturally conditioned to believing that there is something disgusting and obscene about the term housewife or homemaker.

50:23

Very large numbers of young women have been taught to defy the yearnings of their feminine realities. And to insist that their careers come before having children. Now, life gets mighty lonely, when you're a 45, or 55 year old woman, without a family, life gets pretty lonely. And many, many women are even now feeling that they were misled and lied to. But it doesn't change the mood of the culture. Where we hear politicians repeatedly speaking, oh, one of the casualties of COVID has been the drop of women in the workplace, I would think that that's a huge advantage. What's happened, one of the silver linings in the dark cloud of the COVID year has been in fact, the large number of women who've said, You know, I had no idea how much I missed being with my children. That's a good thing. It's not a bad thing.

51:34

But if you are a wonderful progressive, and you are a secular fundamentalist, well, then you want to see women in the workplace. And that reduces the fertility rate. But it's not the only thing that reduces the fertility rate. And here it is that I have to share with you some rather remarkable information. And I think you're going to find this to be every bit as fascinating as I do. Okay. So if you listen to politicians, Barack Obama famously said, the biggest threat facing us right is climate change. If you're one of the people who actually believes that climate change is something that should keep you awake at night, then I, your Rabbi cannot help you. I'm sorry. I wish I could. But even I have to recognize my limitations. But if you are open to the idea, that, in fact, it's a gigantic hoax, and you know how to track the money. And you begin to understand why and how the hoax of manmade climate change is being perpetrated and what the goal is, then you are way ahead of it. Because you are now ready to hear what the genuine threat is.

If you live in America, or you live in your we got listeners all over the world now. But you might be listening to my words, you might be a couple I've come to so much enjoy and admire a couple in Greenland. All right. Who you've heard me talk about I've been in correspondence, they wrote to me and I wrote back, we've been in correspondence, or you might be anywhere around the world. But if you are somewhere with very low fertility rates, and and if your country is made up for it by importing huge numbers of single males have a different cultural background, then you need to worry you really need to worry. Here is a real threat, not climate change. Here's the real threat. The real threat. Now I'm talking about the united states of america now, because I've been tracking it for this country. I don't yet know the similar figures for other countries, I don't know. But here it is.

54:19

I'm going to tell it to you directly. There's been a huge drop in sperm count among men in the United States of America. What does this mean? Well, I mean, technically, a low sperm count is lower than 15 million sperm cells per milliliter of semen. Now, if, if, if you are down at that level, your likelihood of fall if you remain with with lower than 15 million per milliliter, your likelihood of fathering a child is actually pretty low. But it's even worse than that motility figures are down in other The sperm are less aggressive. And that's probably the best way to put it.

55:08

They sort of hang around instead of swimming furiously towards trying to meet up with an ovum and mate and join. They sort of hang out, then they sit back in their lawn chairs, and they put their hands behind their heads, and they say, You know what? It's fine hanging out here. And those sperm, aren't they just not trying to go anywhere. They got no ambition, they've got no masculinity, they've got no aggression at all. That is it. I mean, I'm I'm making light just because it's, it's a serious problem. And it's just too much. It's just too much. But this is a real thing that's happening.

55:57

It's real, it's measurable, doctors are aware of it. And they are not talking a lot about it. But the information is out there. Most recently, a professor of Environmental Medicine and Public Health at Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York and name is Shanna swan. And she's got a new book countdown, how our modern world is threatening sperm counts, altering male and female reproductive development and imperiling the future of the human race. Okay, so now here is where I have to tell you something, which you will not hear anywhere else. The reason that she gives the basic thesis of her book and several of the other studies that have this has been going on, by the way, for I'm aware of it for about 1510 to 15 years.

56:52

I think I first became strongly aware about 12 years ago, but everybody has been noticing that American men are producing less sperm, and less viable sperm. I call it less aggressive sperm, it's sperm that just doesn't seem to have any real interest in moving on in the world, as we say. So. And that's literally what we're talking about. So this is not new, fresh news. Most of the theses, attribute this to pollution, plastics, this process food, non organic food, okay, I do not know how much of the problem of less effective sperm and American men can or should be laid at the feet of plastics and, and non organic food and pesticides. I really don't know, my gut feel is not nearly as much as they think. Because I now want to tell you what their real reason is, right? How the world really works? Well, here's the real reason for why American men's sperm count is down. You know why? Because we've been

The Rabbi Daniel Lapin Podcast

Episode: Plummeting Sperm Counts is the Problem, not Climate Change. What's With You Guys?

Date: 06/04/2021 Length: 1:32:22 hammering away at men's masculinity. For the same period of time, for the last 20, 30, 40 years, we've been pushing against masculinity.

58:37

And the result is, we are making men less masculine. Now, I know that to ask you to accept that is I'm never going to do I'm going to merely pose this. And one of the great things about happy warriors is that we are all capable of hearing news information, data with which we do not intuitively agree and allowing it into our processing Hall and subjecting it to our own analysis, rather than allowing legacy media to dictate what we should believe. And so I know that your intuitive sense is, yeah, yeah, it's got to be pollution. It's got to be environmental. It's got to be all the bad fumes in the air. It's got to be the plastics, it's got to be the non organic foods got to be the pesticides, I realized that we all have a very strong sense, automatically. That must be the reason for the less the lowered quality of American men sperm, right. But I want to introduce you to this idea that our behavior changes not only how we think and believe, but it also changes our bodies. What, really yeah, that's right. Let me explain what I'm talking about.

1:00:03

Here's one of the best examples when men behave less masculine, Li, their testosterone levels drop and dropped. testosterone levels cannot be good for guys, it just cannot be good. It certainly cannot be good for male sexuality and reproduction. What's one way of dropping your testosterone? It's very simple. Go to a therapist who practices crying therapy. That's right. This started a number of, of years ago, I think the therapist and then became an author, I think he nicknamed himself iron john. And, and he, he said, here's the problem with men, you men, we don't know how to cry enough. So there was this American poet Robert Bly. And maybe 1990, or the early 90s, he published this book, Iron Man. And it was based on on an old European Germanic legend about, about the Iron Man. And Robert Bly, the poet, wrote a book about the state of American men and masculinity, etc, etc. Well, one of the consequences of that became this movement, that men need to cry more. And so sure enough, you know, anything novel catches on, there's always going to be followers for the latest recipe for success, things that are new appeal. copywriters know that the word new is a very strong selling word, people go for it. And so this new way, this is how we're going to fix American men, is we're going to encourage them to cry. And this lasted for a couple of years, until somebody made the rather startling discovery, which was no surprise whatsoever to me, and not to anybody knowledgeable in the field of ancient Jewish wisdom. And here's what the great thing is about ancient Jewish wisdom. It's not new. That's the best thing I always speak of ancient Jewish wisdom is providing ancient solutions for modern problems with tried ancient solutions for modern problems. There's nothing new about it. And so no surprise to me that researchers got very alarmed, because they discovered that the more that men forced themselves to cry at these sessions, and by the way, it's not that hard to do, even for those of us who were raised in a rather repressive environment. And today, you know, somebody like me, for instance, I mean, for heaven's sake, you know, British background, and etc. I mean, you know, look, crying is not natural to me at all. But not not to say that I don't think there are times to cry, and I have cried, but it doesn't come easily. I'm embarrassed. When I do. I just am. And you can explain it all, to me logically, just as I can explain it all to myself logically. But the point is that, you'd be surprised how easy it is, if you are with a group of other men, and everybody starts weeping. And by the way, at some time, we must do a program on why humans are the only creatures that can weep and cry. So you're with a group of men, and it starts becoming contagious, and you start feeling a lump in your throat and you start to tears forming in your eyes. Before you know it, you're crying. And that's what these therapy groups were doing during the 1990s was most extraordinary thing. And you'd see all these men weeping away and wiping the tears from their eyes. And then they started hugging each other in the sessions. Yes, I was invited to observe a particular session. And researchers discover dropping testosterone, the more crying the less testosterone. Okay, that's a really important point to understand. So you can actually make changes in your body by the things you do. That's all it is just the act of crying. The other way around, is that at&t it was that discovered round about the same period maybe a little earlier that women when they started hiring women as linemen. That means by the way, going through the back country, and climbing up towers, lugging a heavy container of tools to do work at the top of the towers, grueling physical work very much work for men, but not surprising. There were women who were determined to show that they were just like men. Well guess what?

The Rabbi Daniel Lapin Podcast

Episode: Plummeting Sperm Counts is the Problem, not Climate Change. What's With You Guys?

Date: 06/04/2021 Length: 1:32:22

1:04:54

They stopped their menstrual cycles. Women who have enormous grueling physical regimens lose their ability to conceive a child. This happens to some ballerinas, by the way, some very dedicated ballerinas, that's right, the things you do, can have profound changes on your body. So here is the shocking information. And every microscopic morsel of your being is going to want to reject what I'm now telling you. But, you know, chew it around, savor it, think about it, tested against your own real life observations, discuss it with friends, and see what you make of it. But here it is. When men engage in non masculine activities, their masculinity suffers.

When women engage in non feminine activities, their femininity suffers in many, many different ways. Or to put it in the negative when men engage in female behavior. You remember, by the way, again, I jumped back to the Bible, there is a very good reason why the good Lord said men should not wear women's clothing. Because any tendency on the part of men to behave like women will make their bodies less masculine loss of testosterone, and drop in sperm count. Yeah, so I'm not gonna say that environmental factors and toxicity and plastic etc. And I'm not gonna say it has no result, I simply don't know I have absolutely no information on it at all. But what I will tell you is that I do feel certain that the dominant factor, impacting the drop in men's sperm count in the United States of America, is the denigration of masculinity, and the glorification of femininity, and slamming men, for being men in any way, shape, or form. a result of that, yeah, I'm pretty sure is that another interesting example is what's happened to women. Not only do women feel less of an urge to have a baby, when women behave in masculine ways, when women are urged to behave in masculine ways, when women are taught, particularly on the university campus, that there is value in them emulating male concupiscence there is value in them looking at male female relationships as men do, in exactly the opposite way that nature and the good Lord provided women with a different outlook on relating to a man from the way a man relates to a woman. And the more of that that is done, the less women feel inclined to have children and be mothers to their own detriment and their own sadness. Because you know, the books are going to start proliferating, as we encounter a growing cohort of middle aged and older women, who never, ever had children never expressed their ultimate femininity, by having a child never did it. And they are then going to start, I don't know what they're going to do. I mean, they're going to, they're going to be all kinds of fascinating sociological secondary effects. And I haven't thought about it a lot. But I know that there's going to be a lot of unhappiness and a lot of looking to lay the blame for that unhappiness somewhere, that's going to happen.

1:08:50

Here's another thing that's happened, by the way, the pitch in women's voices has changed dramatically. Not surprisingly, as you encourage women to be more and more like men, they will their bodies will be more and more like men. Absolutely. This is the point I'm making this is a shocking, and for many people disturbing point, and that is you are shaped by the activities you engage in. And we know that's right. If I mean, if if you if you do think you know you give yourself a month, to be very generous, slow to anger, kind, focused, try and give yourself a month to do all those things. At the end of the month, you actually will feel that you're a slightly different person. The things we do change the people we are not only spiritually, but even physically. And so why would it surprise us that women on on average women's voices have dropped in pitch by about 30 cycles are supposed to say hertz, not cycles, hertz mean cycles per second, okay?

It's really very interesting. There's a book, there's a magazine called the Journal of voice, which somebody brought to my attention. And, and sure enough, they've been measuring the fundamental frequency of men and women's voices over the last five decades. And women have gone from what used to be about 230 hertz, which is about an A sharp on your piano, though a sharp just below middle C. And it's, it's gone all the way down to about 200 hertz, that's roughly a G sharp, they actually is an audible difference. And you know what, I'm actually going to play that for you, I think, so that you can, you can really hear it. So here, if you like, is the way women used to speak right, the higher pitch.

And this is now the way now on average, that women sound, the lower pitch, the higher one round about 230 hertz, 230 cycles. A second is the sort of basic fundamental frequency. And now here is what they sound like now closer to 200 hertz. It goes without saying that, whilst everybody in a number of different countries agree, Western countries, by the way, agree that women's voices have dropped in pitch. There are all kinds of speculation on why it is. And the reason, again, using the principles of ancient Jewish wisdom. And again, you know, I'm not I'm not trying to persuade or sell anybody I mean, I'm providing information which you yourself will evaluate in terms of how useful and how true and how accurate it is, from your own experiences. And I won't deny that I love getting mail. I love getting emails from you that, that tell me how you were skeptical at first, you weren't sure about all kinds of I mean, you know, every few weeks that this particular program comes up with, with things that that fall into this category, that sort of sound a little contrary to instinct, counterintuitive. And you write the set. But you know, it turns out you're right. Well, I don't take credit for it. Personally, you know, I don't, I've never once told you all I came up with this. So I thought of this. All all I do is try to be as accurate a transmitter of ancient Jewish wisdom as I possibly can be. And so I want to tell you, the reason for why women's voices have been changing. It's the inverse of why men's sperm counts have been going down. Because women have been conditioned by society and by the trends to become more like men. And men's voices are deeper. Why is that? Well, first of all, in the in the world, as it is, deeper voices speak of aggressiveness.

And so that's why many animals go to a lower register when they're wanting to be threatening. You know, when you hear an animal growl, right, you'll even hear dogs right growl, but dogs can also whine at a high register. So when dogs are feeling subservient, and and plaintive and supplicant, like when they're there, they're trying to, to get some eat, the dog might whine in our high pitch, but when it's wanting to be threatening, first of all, it makes the hair on its neck stand up. So it looks like it's a bigger animal than it is. And it grounds in a low register. So low voice is power, aggressiveness.

1:14:29

Potential, right? High is much more of being a supplicant. And and so it is we've got numerous interesting studies and these things are done for psychology 101 that men are shown pictures and they shown voices and they are asked to associate the voice with the the woman in the picture. And invariably I mean, this is done over and over and over again and each year you know first year psych student So Oh, wow, it's incredible. But of course it happens every single year. And and what happens is that men are shown pictures of, you know, say a dozen women have varying degrees of polka tude. And they're also given the voices of the woman talking, they all say the same thing. And they're asked to match the voices with a woman. And invariably the men put the the, the higher pitch. With the prettier women, they do that all the time. And also a slight breathy quality if you know what I mean. In other words, instead of speaking in very firm, strong, deep measured tones, it's higher pitched and, and just a little bit. Well, I don't know how to say it better than breath here. The men associate that with feminine attractiveness. So there you go.

women's voices going deeper? Yeah. Because we've been telling women to be like men. So why would you be surprised that women who've acted like men start developing deeper voices makes perfect sense. This is just the Anna This is just the the opposite the inverse of men who are being told to behave like women, and to abandon all value in their own masculinity, naturally, they start losing sperm count. It's what could be more natural. What could be more simple, once you understand the basic premise that our actions shape not only our spirits, but our actions actually shape our bodies. Women who engage in masculine behaviors tend to lose the capacity to conceive, and they get deeper voices, and men that abandon their masculinity and embrace their femininity. Well, not surprisingly, the sperm count drops. And so if you think as I do, that declining population in the United States of America and in your country, is a real problem, when you really want to think about the contribution being made by the erosion of male female differences. No longer do we celebrate the beautiful, high tension, polarity of masculinity and femininity. No longer do we celebrate the exquisite ecstasy of a masculine man and a feminine woman finding one another.

1:17:56

It's now all been reduced to a dull, gray uniform, blandness, men losing masculinity, women losing femininity. And we have to live in the mess that results from all of that. Pretty bad. So here is the point. If you, for some reason or another are a man, and you want to become more women, like, hey, just start behaving like a woman. Do a little crying. And I'm not saying that in a negative way. By the way.

1:18:39

Women crying, arouse enormous protectiveness in their men. That's a good thing. And coupled with that is a fascinating thing. I haven't wanted to talk about this for the last couple of years until some verification was in but I think I'm okay with it now, which is that female tears reduce male libido and order. Isn't that interesting.

1:19:06

Great studies done I really enjoyed reading about this because they got exactly the same chemical mix of salt water that is found in in a woman's tears and found it had no effect on men, but women's tears. You know, as a man knows that this is a tear of a woman crying totally reduces a man's sexual order. Why? It would seem to make a lot of sense, right? Because if your wife is miserable and unhappy and upset, what she does not need from you is libido. What she needs is empathy and compassion. If you like she needs your feminine side. And this is one of the reasons that in again, biblical law, right. Husbands and wives are in enjoying to have fulfilling beautiful, happy physical lives of intimacy. But if shall we say the wife is a mourner, she's lost her father, she's lost her mother.

1:20:09

At that point, the husband is not allowed. for a certain period of time, he has to leave her alone, physically. He has to talk to her and be kind to her, and use words, but not use his body. Precisely For this reason, the whole idea is that when a woman is crying when she's unhappy, right, she doesn't need masculinity at that moment, she needs a softer approach from her husband. And a fully developed man is a man who is fully masculine, but is capable of subduing that if you're like, I'm calling it aggressiveness, meaning it in a good way, not a bad way. It's able to subdue it, it's the, in the aggressiveness I speak about finds fulfillment, in confidence in authority, in ambition, in, in security in internal security, you know, like not having the need to put down other people, that that sense of, of, of generosity in every way is a very masculine instinct. But it's, it's really, really very fascinating how this works. So for for men who want to enact, you shouldn't want to, but if you want to be a woman, just start acting, doing women like things, whether you feel like him or not, wear women's clothing, make yourself cry, all kinds of other women's activities, traditionally feminine activities, and spend a lot of time with with little kids, take them out for walks, hang out with all the other women in the mommy and me groups, whatever. And you will be astonished at what a hit your testosterone will take.

And likewise for women, I have to say exactly the same thing. If you genuinely want to be a man, hey, just start doing masculine things, you know what they are, and don't be surprised your estrogen or plummet, your voice will drop, and all kinds of other difficult and problematic changes will take place. In other words, the way the good Lord created us is it works better when men behave like men and women behave like women. Are there actual behaviors that are more masculine? Obviously, obviously, and are there certain ways of acting that are more feminine? Yeah, absolutely, of course. And the world works better when women increase their femininity, and men increase their masculinity. But all of this can be done by action, right? We all know this right? whistle a happy tune when you're feeling down. Remember, there was a song 100 years ago, you know, Whistling past the graveyard, act as if you're courageous, if you want to feel courageous, etc, etc, we all know these things that you can actually change the way you feel about somebody by acting towards them. I've covered this in the past, right? If, if you don't like the way you feel towards, shall we say, you know, your father, for instance, just start serving him doing things for him. And, and being good to him, you'll be astonished how you begin to feel differently. This is a very well established principle. And I would like you to think about ways you could implement this productively and helpfully in your own life. There are things you can do to change how you feel about certain people, right? Certain people, whether it's a spouse, or a parent, or a child, or whatever it is, they're people who are part of your life, they're not going to go away, you're not going to go away. You You need to be able to change your feelings. Well, here's the way to do it. Our actions change our feelings.

1:23:56

Let me tell you what doesn't change you one little bit. declarations. I announced that I am now a woman or woman announces I am now identifying as a man, don't believe for one moment that that has any impact at all, zero. And as as part of that, how is this working out in California in January of 2021, they passed a California law, right 132, which allows men who identify male prisoners in California State penitentiaries, who identify as women to transfer into women's prisons based on individual preference, no hormones, no surgery, no time spent living as the opposite sex required. Now, as of the end of May, 2021, January, February, March, a five month into the program. 264 men prisoners have been transferred to women's facilities, the number is climbing. And California announces no men have been turned down so far.

1:25:18

By the way, in the same period of time, would you be interested in knowing how many women have transferred to men's prisons? Four, four men have transferred to women's prisons, excuse me, wrong. four women have transferred to men's prisons, 264 men have transferred to women's prisons, why wouldn't they right? You're not going to get killed, you're not going to get assaulted. And Heaven knows, for a lot of reasons, if you get to be locked up. I'd much rather be locked up with a group of women than with a group of men for a lot of reasons. And so this is now law in California. And there is no reason to suppose at the present time that the United States Congress will not pass the Equality Act, which by the way the house already has, we just wait for the Senate. And that will adapt allow nationwide, not just in crazy California. But nationwide, incarcerated biological men who self identify as female would be entitled transfer into women's federal prisons, and possibly also state prisons nationwide.

1:26:33

How's this working out in California? Well, the guys who've transferred things think it's wonderful, the women who have been made uncomfortable, in very obvious ways you'd imagine by men who are being forced to be in the same cells in the same shower facilities, I don't have to be more graphic to tell you that women are desperately unhappy with us. And so all the wonderful progressives of California who care so much about women, are they jumping to the defense and saying, Hey, we made a mistake. State law 132 is a horrible mistake. No, because nothing is more important than advancing the progressive project. In the same way that progressive women are not stepping up to defend high school girls who have to compete in athletics against men who claim to be women.

1:27:35

They're not. Because the progressive project is designed to utterly obliterate biblical transcendent principles and timeless truths, such as male and female, he created them. The notion that God actually has some say in my life, he made me a man, not a woman, regardless of my feelings. And I just have to make the best of that and be as masculine as I possibly can.

1:28:03

No, not at all. We got to obliterate that. And so just because men are saying, I'm a woman that doesn't do make any difference, as many of the female inmates are complaining, the men are exhibiting very typical male reactions to the close presence and proximity of women.

1:28:29

It's pretty bad. The women say that. They may they may as well just drop all the women into San Quentin admit, you know, notorious men's penitentiary. They're unhappy about it to say the least. inmates at Chowchilla are housed at two a room with a sink and toilet inside the cell and only a half door for modesty. The California law specifically states that no inmate may be denied a housing request for any discriminatory reason, including genitalia or sexual orientation.

1:29:11

The women are complaining that all these men who are claiming to be women, and that's why they've transferred are exhibiting typical male attraction to women. And they're, you know, we're sort of using language that is okay, for this particular program. So, so there it is, my friends. Some of the craziness progressiveness, but more importantly, saying, When a man says he's a woman, it makes zero difference. When a woman says she's a man, zero difference. But when a man spends time doing feminine things, then real differences take place in his body. real differences drop in testosterone drop in sperm count. Oh, yeah.

1:30:00

When a woman says she's a man, it's irrelevant means absolutely nothing. But when a woman starts behaving like a man, she's never going to become a man obviously never going to change it into a man. But what it will do is reduce her feminine qualities, her ability to conceive her estrogen levels, her voice drops. All of these things happen as a reminder to us that if you don't like the way you feel, or think about something, start acting the way you would act, if you already felt the way you wished you felt. I hope you got that. I repeated right here it comes again, one more time, as an act of great kindness, and public service on my part. If you don't like the way you feel towards somebody, or think about something, start acting physically the way you would act if you already felt or thought the way you wished you do.

1:31:07

And you'll find that it'll bring about the required change. Because my dear friends, every single Happy warrior, it's worthwhile remembering that we are the consequences of the things we do much more than of the things we think.

1:31:26

As a matter of fact, we end up thinking and believing in accordance with our actions, much more than we act in accordance with our thoughts and beliefs. And it's worthwhile remembering that because it has really practical application in our daily lives as happy warriors. The website RabbiDanielLapin.com. love to see you there.
